WE NOMINATE

Luther Pfahler Eisenhart, 72-year old dean emeritus of the Princeton Graduate School and architect of the University's monumental four-course plan of study, who continues to exert far-reaching influence in the world of education as executive officer of the American Philosophical Society, the nation's oldest and most distinguished learned society. This past week "The Society" assembled once more in its Philadelphia headquarters for its annual meeting and, as has been the case since 1942, when Eisenhart accepted his present position, members were loud in their praise of what this remarkable Princetonian is accomplishing in the name of their organization.

The platitude—"the investigator of mathematical truth comes to all other questions with a decided advantage"—certainly applies to Eisenhart, for it was in the field of mathematics that he was appointed to the Princeton Faculty in 1900, just after the College of New Jersey had proclaimed itself a university. He became one of Wilson's astounding group of "preceptor guys," jumped to a full professorship at age 33 and as preceptor and professor in close contact with undergraduates gathered the experience out of which grew his conviction that one of the aims of education is "to teach the student how to educate himself."

Although Eisenhart is known for such mathematical works as "A Demonstration of the Impossibility of a Triply Asymptotic System of Surfaces" and in the early 1920's was looked upon as one of the "few persons who can talk intelligently with Albert Einstein," he will probably be memorialized as a tremendously energetic and capable administrator—one pipe-loving executive whose memory was so prodigious that he required no filing cabinets in his Nassau Hall office.

Twice a dean, Dean of the Faculty for eight years and Dean of the Graduate School from 1933 until his retirement in 1945, Eisenhart took his first degree at Gettysburg College, where, according to campus rumor of two decades ago, he majored in baseball and accidentally acquired an interest in mathematics. His Ph.D. he earned at Johns Hopkins, the first American institution solely devoted to advanced learning, and he has since been awarded honorary doctorates by Gettysburg, Lehigh, Columbia and Duke. The breadth of his activities is reflected in such widely separated responsibilities as wartime chairman of the Division of Physical Sciences of the National Research Council and one-time president of the Association of American Colleges.

For more than living up to his own characterization of Wilson, whom he once described as "a great teacher, with a vision of an inspiring educational venture;" for constantly deriding the tendency to make fetishes of college degrees of all grades; for placing cooperation above coercion in everything he undertakes; he is TOWN TOPICS' nominee for Bonus Planning. Nearly two centuries ago, the young College of New Jersey gained partial financial support from operating a lottery. In later years, gambling of this nature was outlawed but today a bill has been introduced in the State Legislature calling for a Statewide sweepstakes to underwrite the cost of a veterans' bonus. Paying $300 for domestic service and $800 for an overseas record, the estimated outlay is $165,000,000.

The measure proposes that a lottery patterned after the Irish sweepstakes be operated in New Jersey twice a year. If the bill is enacted, which seems doubtful, it would come up for approval at a referendum next Fall.

In Trenton, a day-long bonus march was staged Monday by several hundred veterans. Crowding the State House gallery, they saved their loudest cheers for James Imbrie (head of the Wallace-minded Independent Citizens League), were undismayed when he glibly demanded immediate bonus legislation without resort to a referendum but advanced no plan for financing it.

Lucky Lad. In pursuit of a tennis ball early Sunday evening Freshman Samuel S. Walstrum climbed atop a freight car in the Pennsylvania yards, brushed against an overhead wire. The charge of electricity was sufficient to hurl him to the ground below.

Knocked unconscious, Walstrum was recovering in Princeton Hospital next day with nothing more than burns of the right hand and foot. At the time

It's New to Us

Inflation Beater. Although sales, per se, do not usually fall in the "new to us" category, a letter which came from Bert-Ann, 230 Nassau Street, sets forth an attitude behind sales policy which we think worth publicizing. Their words do as well or better than ours:

"While textiles still remain high, and there has been no reduction from either the mills or the manufacturers in the lingerie field, we of Bert-Ann have formulated our plan to bring the people of this vicinity price reductions where possible. Each Saturday we plan a 20% reduction on certain items, based on our own prudent shopping amoung our New York suppliers, our lowered "overhead" and modest operating expenses, etc.

"We are, of course, interested in our American way of life and a profit motive. But at the same time, we want no grappling with our conscience when it comes to pricing our merchandise. The good people of Princeton have been extremely nice to us, and it's a poor rule that won't work both ways."

Rosedale Grocery. Probably the most versatile spot in town, Rosedale (Mills, Nursery, Butcher) at 262 Alexander Street, is adding another convenience to those it already offers: a grocery. The emphasis goes on the convenience—if, as we recommended several weeks ago, you buy your meat there, the newborn grocering facilities will pretty much make a one-stop affair of your marketing, with the additional joy of shopping at a spot where there is ample space to park right in front.

Everything will be easily visible for choosing, easily accessible for loading your self-service carts. Canned, bottled and packaged goods are well-known brands, priced at regular grocery (not cut-rate) figures. As you must know by now, Rosedale carries a complete line of frozen fruits and vegetables—fresh ones will be stocked before long.

Leghorns and Panamas. For a surprisingly low price, in view of the high quality, those old stand-bys, imported Leghorn and Panama hats, are he touched the wire, police said, it was being charged with 650 volts, so much that it hurled him away. Had the normal 250 voltage been coursing through, Walstrum would have been electrocuted.

Aftermath. Possibly less surprising than the fact that Mercer County gave Harold Stassen a clear plurality over every other candidate for president last week was the failure of General Dwight Eisenhower to draw a single vote from either party. Actually, some 26,000 voters (about one in four) turned out in the county last week, less than 2,600 of them indicating a presidential preference. Stassen polled 855, Dewey 700, Truman 405, Vandenberg 129, MacArthur 99, Taft 89, Wallace 49.

Interest Mounting. A well-attended meeting at the Township School Tuesday night served to: (1) hold the attention of some 200 persons for over two hours; (2) bring out in the open the question of consolidation, which was at first ruled "out of order;" (3) confirm the estimate advanced here eight weeks ago that a $700,000 bond issue will increase the tax rate by 70 points

News of the Theatres

The Playhouse

State of the Union (Fri. thru Wed.) stars Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn in a timely, swiftly-paced satire on the American political scene, with action centering around Mr. Tracy's presidential aspirations. One of the year's best pictures.

Homecoming (Thurs. thru Wed.) goes back five years for a war-time setting as it casts Clark Gable in the role of an Army surgeon and Lana Turner as a nurse who loves him despite his marriage. There's action and drama aplenty in both Italy and France, but many a scene is overlong and the war theme is unwelcome.

The Garden

Alias a Gentleman (Fri., Sat.) caters to the antics of Wallace Beery in a dull tale that sets him free as an ex-convict seeking to go straight.

Furia (Mon., Tues., Wed.) is Italian fare, fresh and somewhat spicy, served in a rural setting. Not too well done, a fact unlikely to bother the undergraduate cheering section interested in seeing the voluptuous Isa Pola display her wares.

Tarzan and the Mermaids (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) is Swimmer Johnny Weissmuller's latest bit of whimsy in which he rescues Brenda Joyce from a forced marriage. Shot in Mexico with some good underwater swimming scenes.

now available in new styles at Joan's Dress Shop (63 Palmer Square.)

The models, all of them simple as they should be, range from cloche types to a mannish Panama with a large brim that can be done-with-what-you-will. There are rolled brims, with pork-pie or round crowns; also a large off-the-face Leghorn. With very few exceptions, the hats can be becomingly worn by young or not-so, with their ability to be stuck on the back of the head, tilted to one side, or planted in conservative fashion all the way down.

The trimmings, too, are simple, with ribbons and bows, feathers or an occasional bit of gold tastefully used for enlivening purposes.

Children's Bathing Suits. It may seem somewhat over-eager to discuss bathing suits right now; but if this year follows last year's pattern, and you don't give some thought to the subject early, you may well end up like us. We scoffed at the people who bought their kids bathing suits in the spring, waited until a nice reasonable (and seasonable) time like June, and got stuck with bedraggled leftovers.

The Little Clothesline has its first shipment, all of the well-known and respected Sacony make. Small sizes go from 2 to 6, with those for girls carrying up to 14. Trunks have the most variety, with cotton-lined wool used in solid colors and figured designs (such as penguins). Some have elastic run throughout to help keep that streamlined fit! One-piecers come in lastex, minus skirt of any sort (which, on a size 6, makes the appeal plus.) Colors, both plain and as backgrounds for prints, include red, aqua, white, royal, yellow and navy; prices are $3.50 for trunks, $3.95 and $4.95 for suits.

PEARLS AMONG POLICIES

Question: When is a $5000 string of pearls worth $2000?

Answer: When a $10,000 house is worth $20,000.

H. C. ("Cobbles") STURHAHN

Which is right now.
Values change. Pearls are worth about half what they were ten years ago and we all know what has happened to houses!
That house you spent ten thousand dollars for is worth that to you just as long as NOTHING happens to it but woe to you if something did and you had to replace it at present day building costs. Put your insurance dollar where it is needed. If you haven't the time to weed out the "pearls" among your policies let your Insurance man do it for you. This is his business.
